ADG ADDS FOUR NEW HIRES

COLUMBIA, MD (January 10, 2010) — Jeff Antkowiak, president and chief creative officer of ADG Creative, is welcoming the following new hires at the strategic communications firm:

- Account executive Jessica Brown honed her expertise in advertising and public relations at the Cyphers Agency and Kaiser Associates. She is a graduate of Loyola University Maryland (formerly Loyola College in Maryland), where she served as president of Lambda Pi Eta, the National Communications Honor Society.
- Designer Christina Bittinger brings her passion for visual storytelling to ADG from Frank Strategic Marketing, where she worked on campaigns for association and b-to-b clients. She graduated from Stevenson University (formerly Villa Julie College) with a degree in visual communication design.
- Senior database engineer Judy Bruns comes to ADG from BSC Consulting, where for nearly a decade she provided database analysis, design, and implementation services for regional technology companies. A Microsoft Certified Professional, she graduated from University of Maryland Baltimore County with a bachelor's degree and earned a master's degree from The Johns Hopkins University.
- IT director Binh Duong joins ADG with more than ten years of experience providing IT infrastructure design, support, and consulting services to businesses throughout the Baltimore-Washington region. He holds a bachelor of science degree in information technology from University of Maryland.

"We're excited to have these talented professionals join the ADG Creative team. Their addition not only enhances the variety and quality of services we can offer our clients, but helps our firm deliver on the business opportunities that continue to come our way," said Mr. Antkowiak.
